The molecular mechanisms by which intracellular signaling pathways mediate axon outgrowth following injury remain an open question. The PI has recently found that expression of an activated form of the GSK3ß kinase in injured dorsal root ganglion (DRG) neurons promotes axon growth that is dependent upon the expression of an activated form of the GSK3ß kinase in injured dorsal root ganglion (DRG) neurons promotes axon growth that is dependent upon the expression of an activated form of the GSK3ß kinase in injured dorsal root ganglion (DRG) neurons promotes axon growth that is dependent upon the expression of an activated form of the GSK3ß kinase in injured dorsal root ganglion (DRG) neurons promotes axon growth that is dependent upon the expression of an activated form of the GSK3ß kinase in injured dorsal root ganglion (DRG) neurons promotes axon growth that is dependent upon that expression of an activated form of the GSK3ß kinase in injured dorsal root ganglion (DRG) neurons promotes axon growth that is dependent upon the expression of an activated form of the GSK3ß kinase in injured dorsal root ganglion (DRG) neurons promotes axon growth and sprouting the transcription factor SRF. The specific aims of this proposal are to (1) determine the role of GSK3/SRF signaling in the promotion of axon outgrowth and sprouting by injury. The focus of this work will be to define the role of GSK3/SRF signaling in the promotion of axon outgrowth and sprouting by injury. The focus of this work will be a major first step in defining the mechanism by which GSK3 regulates axon outgrowth and sprouting in the injured DRG neuron. Q: ssh do not work in activation and sprouting in the proposal are to (1) determine the role of GSK3/SRF signaling in the promotion of axon outgrowth and sprouting by injury. The focus of this proplem is a cut of the proposal are to (1) determine the role of GSK3/SRF signaling in th
